

COMPENSATION 102 FOR HR PROFESSIONALS ESSENTIALS HANDS ON SKILLS FOR COMPENSATION (EVALUATION, BENCHMARKING, STRUCTURES AND ADVISING MANAGERS)

Course Objective

This two-day course provides learners with hands-on practical skills needed to do actual compensation work within a business environment. It is designed to supplement theoretical and technical knowledge of compensation gained in the Compensation 101 course, certification courses or other knowledge based training on remuneration practices. The facilitator will demonstrate the actual process steps involved in job evaluations, salary structure design and annual salary review. Using simulated tools and data for a fictitious company, learners will work as table groups on their own laptops to complete the above tasks using the methods used by large companies.

Target Audience

This class is designed specifically for HR or Comp & Benefits professionals with basic knowledge of compensation practices such as job evaluation and market pricing, but who wish to acquire or sharpen practical hand-on skills to perform related tasks. Those who do not yet have basic theoretical of compensation and benefits are encouraged to attend Compensation 101 (or equivalent GRP courses) prior to this class.

Learning Outcomes

By the end of the session, participants should be able to:

1. Evaluate a job to determine grade
2. Participate in salary surveys
3. Market price a job to determine market value
4. Conduct a market analysis to determine the company's competitive pay position and recommend a salary budget
5. Develop a salary range structure including cost and impact analysis modeling
6. Develop salary increase guidelines that help managers differentiate increases based on performance and market position (compa-ratio), and align to the approved salary budget
7. Use Excel software to create pivot tables, charts, regression, and common functions including IF, VLOOKUP, COUNTIF, ROUND and others
